CASE Credit Union Receives National Recognition from the Credit Union National Association

Awards recognize efforts in financial literacy and community service

LANSING, Mich. — CASE Credit Union was recently awarded first place in the Alphonse Desjardins Award adult category and honorable mention for the Dora Maxwell Award for the 2020 Credit Union National Association Awards.

The Alphonse Desjardins Award honors credit union leadership for efforts with youth and adult financial literacy. The Dora Maxwell Award recognizes community service achievements by credit unions.

Jeffery Benson, President and CEO of CASE Credit Union, said the recognition reflects the hard work CASE puts into helping its members and the Greater Lansing area.

“We are honored to be recognized at the national level by the Credit Union National Association,” Benson said. “These awards reflect our commitment to our members and the Greater Lansing community. They are what makes us great.”

Norma McGarry, Community Development Specialist for CASE Credit Union, said helping people and businesses in the Greater Lansing area is the foundation of CASE.

“Our goal was to build awareness in our community and increase partnerships with other organizations whose focus is aligned with the philosophy of People Helping People,” McGarry said. “It is our obligation to assist those in our community that need help, and we are grateful for the agencies who have partnered with us to work toward that goal.”
